Loven Mr. G Fop a atley.

The particulars of a thrill og adventure with a panther in sorthwest Arks nase reached here last night. Grawford Baxley, a mostel hanter, killed a deer, and in conveying it to his mountain home the blood attracted a panther. Later in the evening. Mattie, the airteen year old drughter of Burley, white strateging the hise of the slain deer in a shed night should be strated by the panther, which threw her down and fastened its claws in her body. Her across drew her father to the pack, and, after an emiting atruggle, the minual was driven away. The girl was not excitedly hart.

will in making all about him his instruments. In these respects 'Lord' Besconsfield, was the groatest leader of men probably ever known in in this country. When a newspaper was beginning to occasion him some annowal code by its persistent attacks on the Berlin tree zy, he sent for the journalist, and in the space of a minute changed him by a denterons compliment, from a consert to statelist. In the sameway, after he denounced his colleague, Lord Saisbury, as a great master of gibes and flouris and jetra, he prophilated him by a letter in which the quainty is sit that he had under taken a humorous deferice of him in the boase of commons, which upon reflection, he was aftered would have a somewhat columns appearance in

It is said that the greatest dread of a gambler is that he will be paralyzed. They nearly all expect to die from a shock of some kind. It may come from the fact that a great many of them have gode that way. If a man with a withored arm or log should happen is a gambling shouse the dealer would quit his chair. Another dread of gamblers is a man who comes in to play with a came in his hand. That is regarded as had luck to the house.
